

FATHER'S

Summer is here, and with it comes energy, momentum, and a fresh chance to lead with purpose. The Presidents Club of Dayton has been hard at work, and I want to thank each of you for your continued commitment to Dayton's civic fabric. June is a busy month with celebrations and observances. Here is a reminder of one observance and one national holiday. There are many more, celebrate and enjoy the month of June.

Juneteenth (short for June Nineteenth) is a U.S. holiday that marks the end of slavery in the United States — specifically, the day when the last enslaved people were officially freed, on June 19, 1865, in Galveston, Texas.

Nominations for the 2025 Citizen Legion of Honor are now closed. Thank you to everyone who submitted. The honoree will be announced later this month, and preparations are underway for this year's luncheon on October 8, 2025, at the Sinclair Conference Center. More details to follow.

Meet Katie Meyer, President and CEO of Downtown Dayton Partnership (DDP). She leads the charge for economic development and revitalization in the heart of Dayton. From new investments to long-term growth plans, Katie is at the center of it all. Get the latest updates on how many dollars are being invested downtown—and what that means for the future. Got questions? She's got answers.

In case you missed it, Dan Edwards, a powerhouse in media and communication, spoke to us last month about Body Language. He is a graduate of the prestigious Body Language Institute in Washington, D.C., and one of the nation's rare Master-Certified Professional Development speakers, an expert in decoding and teaching the Science of Body Language to help others lead, influence, and connect with impact.

Learning body language is important to people in nonprofit organizations because it enhances communication, strengthens relationships, and increases the effectiveness of outreach and leadership. Here's why:

1. Builds Trust and Connection – Nonprofits often rely on community engagement, donor relations, and volunteer coordination. Understanding body language helps staff and leaders appear approachable, sincere, and confident, which builds trust with stakeholders.
2. Improves Communication – A large portion of communication is nonverbal. Being able to read cues such as eye contact, posture, and facial expressions allows nonprofit professionals to gauge interest, confusion, or discomfort, and adjust their message accordingly.
3. Enhances Fundraising and Advocacy – Interpersonal interactions during fundraising appeals or advocacy efforts are more successful when the speaker can effectively project confidence, empathy, and passion—often communicated through nonverbal behavior.
4. Strengthens Team Dynamics – Understanding body language helps in resolving conflicts, motivating volunteers, and fostering a positive work environment by recognizing when team members may be stressed, disengaged, or need support.
5. Boosts Public Speaking and Leadership Presence – Leaders in nonprofit settings often speak at events, lead meetings, or appear in public. Strong, confident body language improves their presence and influence.

We want More.....We will have him back.....Stay Tuned!!!

I asked Mike Leibold to change the input process for events for members and others to enroll in events and give the organizations the ability to make one entry and pay with a credit card or check. Celebrating 250 Years of History of Women in the Military

Women have served with, and in, the military since the Revolutionary War, although until World War I, they were many times forced to disguise their true identity. Once America entered the "War to end all wars" women were finally allowed to serve as clerks, radio operators and telephone switchboard operators. More women joined the military as nurses during this time as well. With the attack on Pearl Harbor the role of women in the military exploded, with women now flying aircraft, serving as instructors, and ultimately working on Top Secret projects such as the "Bombe" decoding machine developed and built in Dayton.

With the Korean War and Vietnam War, the role of women continued to expand to a certain degree. However, while there were women's organizations as part of the military (WACs, WAVES, and WAFs) they were not allowed to serve in combat or command men. Pregnancy was the cause for involuntary discharge.

By the end of the Vietnam War, many of these restrictions were lifted, with the exception of the ability to serve in combat roles. This was essentially a moot point as the nature of warfare began to change. From the invasion of Panama and Grenada to Operation DESERT STORM women took on leadership roles in combat, even though technically not allowed to do so.

After September 11th, virtually all restrictions for female service members were done away with. In environments where there are essentially no front lines, and dealing with insurgencies made any such restriction useless.

Throughout the past 250 years women have gone from serving in secret to leading their services as 4-star Generals and Flag Officers; their journey fraught with stereotypes, chauvinism, and at times plain ignorance. They've overcome these obstacles and shown they have always been up to the task of preserving and defending the freedoms we all enjoy today.

Written by Mark Conrad is a retired Air Force Master Sergeant and has been a military history buff for 50 years. During this time, he has contributed to a dozen military periodicals, reference books and a two volume scholarly work on the war in Europe in World War II.

I'm Cathy Beers-Conrad, Public Affairs/Community Relations with the Museum & volunteer as Hospice, twice a week, on the Dayton VA. A couple of weeks ago the museum was able to provide a family with a dress uniform for burial, his medals, hat and gloves. This is the 11th vet in 7 years that we've been able to provide a uniform and/or medals for burial. This is one of the many free services we provide.
